Siletto Vineyard is managed by Nat Wong and owned by John Siletto, whose late father Ron Siletto was an integral figure in the history of San Benito County viticulture. The Siletto family has been farming in the region for the past 30 years and now manage a total of 83 acres with over 30 planted varieties, most of them Italian and French varieties rarely seen in this country. Despite the potential for scorching daytime temperatures, San Benito County's proximity to the ocean allows coastal air to cool the area in the evenings, leading to huge diurnal temperature swings.
